PETITION TO CONGRESS BY INHABITANTS OF
JACKSON COUNTY (Ref. Dec. 11, 1816)

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, the petition of the undersigned inhabitants of the County of Jackson in the Mississippi Territory, respectfully

That many of your petitioners settled in the said county of Jackson, while a part of West Florida, by the tacit permission of the Spanish Government, and continued to occupy the land upon which they were permitted to settle, during the existence of the Spanish Government in that province. The happy revolution which placed them under the American Government extended to them many civil and political rights, and the protection of a great Republic. They therefore hailed the auspicious change; and in the late war showed their devotion to the country which is both willing and able to protect them. When the American Government has extended to them such important rights, they cannot believe that it will deprive them of one minor consequence which they enjoyed under the Spanish Government. They were tacitly permitted by the proper Spanish authorities, to settle upon and cultivate a small tract of land for the sustenance of their families, and they cannot believe that it will be taken from them by a just and generous government. Your petitioners believe that donations were granted to all those persons who had settled upon the lands which were acquired from the Spanish Government by the Treaty of 1795, previously to the final evacuation of that county by the Spanish troops. They ask no more: They cannot expect less. They cannot believe that congress will discriminate between those persons living above the 31st degree of north latitude, and those living below. Both have been added to the American Government: One class has experienced its justice, and even munificence; the other will not expect the American government to be less just, or even less generous. Your petitioners are unable to acquire other lands; and should congress decide against them, the event which placed them under the American government and which they hailed with joy, will produce to them nothing but want and misery. Confiding in the liberal policy which has ever prevailed in the National Councils, especially towards those who have been added to the American nation, they respectfully pray that they may be permitted to continue upon the soil which they have hitherto cultivated at every hazard, looking forward to the peaceful prospect before them. Your petitioners respectfully pray that donations may be granted to all those persons who have

FIRST REPORT ON LAND CLAIMS, 1814

The first report on record concerning the lands in what is now Jackson and George Counties has the dates 1814-1815, but, according to the petitions already given, the contents of this report did not become known to the settlers themselves till a much later date. Also, another factor which would have been disturbing if they had known was that there was no recommendation as to whether or not any of these titles should be confirmed.

The names of the claimants have been rearranged into alphabetical order. In most cases it has been possible to add the description of section, township, and range, which surveys made possible about 1830. (Since all townships are South and all ranges West, these are not added. See maps.)

It will be noted that many section numbers are above the usual 36. This was caused by the boundaries having been established before the surveys were made and it was easier for the surveyors to lay off irregular sections than to designate a claim

* Names marked thus were signed with "His X mark". The original signatures were not in alphabetical order.

JACKSON COUNTY

In December, 1812, Mobile County was divided into three counties, with Jackson in the center with about the area now included in Jackson and George.

The quorum or orphans' court mentioned above had jurisdiction over county affairs similar to the present board of supervisors, and in addition some minor matters now under the chancery court. During the latter part of this period the name "probate court" was used.

Hamilton; 1818, John Williams, Samuel Davis, and John Davis; 1819, Thomas Bilbo, Stephen Bradford, Archibald McManus, and Phillip Howell; 1820, Daniel Pickett, William Starks, and Daniel McInnis; 1822, George Davis, Sr., and Peter Fairley, Sr.; 1823, Thomas Bilbo; 1824, Stephen Bradford, John Fairley, and Moses Ward; 1826, William Starks and Joseph Morris.

Seaman; 1824, Walter Denny, Charles S. Holland, John Brewer, Ellis Fairbanks, William C. Seaman; 1827, Thomas I. Tucker, William Graham, Edmund Moss, and Allen McLendon.

Sheriffs (Note: The naming of more than one year does not mean a continuous term, but that commissions were found for each of these years). 1812, 1814, Perry King; 1817, John Brewer, Jr.; 1819, 1821, 1823, Edward Williamson; 1824, Bartholomew Childress.

The absence of real property on this tax roll is unusual. Most tax rolls for this period of time show number of acres, class, quality, town lots, location and value of town lots, by what right or title land claimed, amounts of merchandise for sale, and carriages by number of wheels.

Hello!

I am looking for direction in pursuing some family history, and I hope you can help point me towards some source material.

My mother was Eula Clyde Miller, born in Orange Grove, Miss., on Aug. 7, 1922. Her father was Thomas Jefferson Miller and her mother was Stella Murray. Thanks to family Bibles, I have most of the birth and death dates, but I'm trying to fill in other gaps.

I understand my grandfather owned a mill at one time, presumably near Orange Grove. It burned, and later so did the house. We retained a portion of the property along U.S. 90 well into the 1980s, when it was sold. I am having trouble tracking down anything about the mill.

I also am a little lost on the Murrys, although I understand my grandmother taught in a one-room schoolhouse in the area, probably in the 1905-1913 range. My great-grandfather was Andrew Jackson Murray, whose wife was Annie Elizabeth Howell.

Any help you can give me on leads to follow up will be appreciated. My e-mail address is kaupwik@pnx.com, if that is more convenient.

Orange Grove

Orchards gone; area maintains identity

BY REGINA HINES

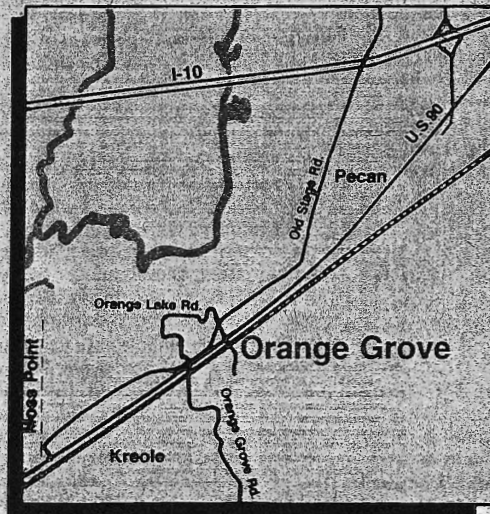

Mississippi Press Staff

The orchards of sweet golden fruit that gave their name to the Jackson County's southeasternmost community are long gone, but the area is still known as Orange Grove.

The once-prized satsuma orange crop met a gradual death over the years from freezing temperatures, hurricane winds and saltwater floods.

Today, about 1,550 people live in this quiet, mostly residential area nestled around the railroad tracks and intersected by U.S. 90.

Some Orange Grove residents live on large plots of land, separated by tall pine thickets, where their families have been for many years. Newcomers have come here to live in less crowded surroundings

For about half a century, when there was a post office and railroad depot at Orange Grove, the community thrived. The Old Spanish Trail, now Old Highway 90, was a major artery and the coming of the railroad in the late 1870s brought more commerce into the tiny rural settlement. Old newspaper ads mention businesses there that catered to travelers, like the Taketa Cabin, a tea room and filling station of about 60 years ago.

But there are few businesses at Orange Grove now, except a gas station, some scattered nightspots and mobile home parks.

The first landowner around present-day Orange Grove was probably David K. Murray, who had been living in nearby Alabama and received a U.S. land patent for vast acreage in 1857. For years the settlement was called Murray's Station.

When the post office was created in 1876, the place was christened Orange Grove. David Murray's son, Andrew Jackson Murray, who spent most of his life in the community, became the first postmaster in his early '20s.

By the early 1870s, the Clark, Bosarge, Dixon, Ladnier, Trehern, Brown and Bang families settled around the Murrays. Their children's names appear on Jackson County's earliest existing school rolls. Later the Cowarts, Millers and Robertses came to the community.

People who knew Orange Grove around the time of World War I remember that an old schoolhouse was located north of the present Orange Grove Cemetery. Later, youngsters attended the Orange Lake School between Orange Grove and its northeastern neighbor, Pecan.

In the 1890s Dr. Charles Leuba of Kentucky brought his family to Orange Grove and tended to the medical needs of the area. A decade earlier, a Tennessee native, Dr. James P. Dancer, had been the only physician in the community.

Leuba's daughter, Fannie Leuba Pierce, was postmistress from 1903 to 1906 and his wife, Pauline Leuba, served from 1907 to 1913, when Fannie Pierce took over again. Alice Roberts was the last postmistress in 1914, before the post office was closed and Orange Grove residents had to take their business to Kreole, two miles to the west. But for many years after that, the voting polls were placed in Mrs. Roberts' yard, on the northside of U.S. 90, recalls her granddaughter Vera Jones.

"Orange Grove was a pretty booming community. There were several stores, a post office and a bake shop. Probably its best years were between the late 1800s and the 1920s. Then it went down," said Orange Grove native Mrs. Bettie Switzer McLeod. She is the granddaughter of Dr. Leuba. Her father, C.D. Switzer and her uncle, Valerie Pierce, were both station agents at Orange Grove. Her mother, Eva Switzer, was once a wireless operator at the station.

An economic mainstay for many years was the J.W. Miller sawmill, located near Shingle Mill Landing. But the exhaustion of the timber in the area and Miller's death brought a halt to the industry.

I.P. Delmas planted an extensive pecan orchard at Orange Grove in the early 1900s, which continued to flourish for many years after Mrs. C.V. Moore of Pascagoula bought the property.

Mrs. McLeod remembers the heavy destruction of the July 5, 1916 hurricane vividly.

"Mr. Andrew Murray came up and told us that a storm was coming. Some of those old people could tell things like that by just seeing the birds fly. He knew it before it came over the wireless," she said. "He was a good neighbor."

"It was a tidal wave and our yard was flooded, but the railroad tracks were high ground," she said.

The Pascagoula Chronicle said that winds ranging from 100 to 125 miles per hour blew most of the day and more than 10 inches of rain fell. About $300,000 damage to crops, timber and orchards was reported in Jackson County and it washed out some of the tracks near Orange Grove.

By the late 1920s the once promising community of Orange Grove was on a decline. Kreole with its busy paper mill and business section was becoming a center of trade and the railroad depot at Orange Grove was no longer needed. The railroad station closed in 1936. Only 20 years old, the building had been rebuilt in 1916 after it was heavily damaged in a hurricane six years before. By then, Orange Grove was mainly a farming community of about 125 people with syrup and pecans being the principal products.

In 1941 the station was torn down.

But several years ago this inconspicuous little community had its claim to national fame. Local historian Betty Rodgers said the notice came from Orange Lake, a large body of water located north of U.S. 90 that was created from a dirt pit from highway construction in the 1920s. The lake was cited in Ripley's Believe It Or Not as the world's only known manmade springwater lake.

The site where Deborah Porter was buried became known as the Ocean Springs Hotel Cemetery. It was northwest of the hotel. The cemetery was removed by a Works Progress Administration Work party in 1935. Tombstone inscriptions, location and historical data provided by Ray L. Bellande, January 1992. See map on page 27.

O'NEAL GRAVE

The 1938 WPA Cemetery List indicated that the J. B. O'Neal grave site was located in Section 4, T5S-R8W. Apparently markers from this cemetery were relocated to the George Byrd Cemetery. This is also known as the Henry Fletcher Cemetery. See map on page 17.

ORANGE GROVE

The Orange Grove Cemetery is located in Section 23, T7S-R5W, east of Kreole and south of Highway 90, on Orange Grove Road. Tombstone inscriptions were compiled November 18, 1969 and updated by Betty Clark Rodgers, April 24, 1996. The survey is by lots rather than rows beginning in the old section, east side of east driveway going from north to south. See map on page 24.
